Wooleen Station

Wooleen Station is a working cattle station in the outback of Western Australia. Hosts, the Pollock family, will make your stay comfortable, educational and enjoyable in the National Trust listed homestead, the self-contained rammed earth guest houses or in the camping grounds.

Wooleen offers eco-tours with David out into the rangelands and the tours include understanding of the ecology of the rangelands, the problems the pastoral industry face as a whole, the workings of the cattle property, flora and fauna, early pioneering history, aboriginal culture and the peace and quiet of the ancient landscape.

Enjoy a sunset tour of the oldest lands in the world or self-drive tours or even bush-walking experiencing at this wonderful station.

Homestead stays includes luxury accommodation in the original 1918 homestead bedrooms, home-style cooking, and a cellar full of Western Australian wines, billiard room, library, swimming pool and an oasis of a garden.

Self-contained two-bedroom guesthouses have full kitchen facilities, bathroom and an open fireplace.
